

Call for Papers

Ukrainian Special Issue

The SRiL special issue is dedicated to papers presenting research results on the local and regional development of Ukraine. The Special Issue is a response to the challenging situation of Ukrainian scholars due to the Russian invasion as well as the growing demand for knowledge on Ukrainian issues. We invite scholars, in particular from Ukraine, regardless of their current location.

Authors interested in responding to this Call for Papers are encouraged to send their articles on economic, social, environmental and political aspects of regional and local development, both from national and international perspectives. We accept papers in English, of the length of about 40,000-50,000 characters with spaces. A short abstract (max 100 words) and keywords (max 6) should be added as well as the basic information about all authors (affiliation with institution's address, authors' e-mails and correspondence postal addresses) as well as all appropriate acknowledgements.
